VVC Students Talk Safety

By Jessica Boykin
RamPage Reporter

One, Two, Three..., Ten seconds speed by, flashes of gunfire, fellow students down. Take a moment to think about that. How would you react in an instances notice? In the wake of Oregon’s mass shooting, many people from various colleges including Victor Valley College students began to voice their concerns about safety on campus. Nearly two months to the date, a shooter opened fire on the campus of Umpqua Community College, killing ten students and injuring nine. The ability to know when a shooting is going to occur is nearly the same as knowing when you’re going to be involved in a traffic accident. These incidents are unpredictable, indiscriminating, and unexpected. Due to these circumstances, there have been 142 school shootings in the US since the Sandy Hook shooting in 2012. “That is near average of one a week,” cites Mass Shooting Tracker. You may be asking yourself; how it can be that easy for a shooter to obtain a gun? Some say gun laws are not strict enough and others may say that the root of the cause is mental illness. Realistically both mental illness and gun laws may be strong factors. On October 1, 2015 following the Oregon shooting, at a news conference Obama strongly advised journalists to tally up the amount of Americans who have been killed by terrorism attacks and the number of Americans who have been killed by gun violence. Shockingly, 24 Americans have been killed by terrorism and 280,024 have been killed by gun violence in the past decade. Although this large number is combined with other mass shooting and not only on campus shootings, it is definitely a number to consider. Earlier this week, a poll was conducted and 20 Victor Valley College students were surveyed about the safety on campus. When asked if students were aware

VVC Scores with San Manuel and Edison

A helping hand is nice to have and fortunately, VVC has two. The San Manuel Band of Mission Indians and Edison International made generous donations to the school. A donation of $107,362 from San Manuel Band of Mission Indians was given to the Emergency Medical Services Program (EMS). The program will receive five Electrocardiogram (EKG) machines; a critical component of the EMS program.

The second donation of $25,000 was from Edison International, parent company to Southern California Edison. The donation is given to students who are pursuing education in the fields of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM). This donation will provide 25 scholarships to STEM students and over a thousand hours of tutoring to all students in the STEM programs.

Every semester, at least 4,600 students at VVC need tutoring in STEM subjects. In 2013, VVC opened the Math Success Center, where students receive tutoring and a quiet work space. VVC is not the only school to be given generous donations.

Nursing Dept. Simulation Lab Top 5%

In July 2015, the construction of the 29,244-square foot Dr. Prem Reddy Health and Sciences Building was completed. This project was funded through Measure JJ Bond funds and a $2-million donation made by CEO of Prime Healthcare Services, Dr. Prem Reddy. The building features countless resources and training for nursing students.

Among these resources includes the Simulation Lab, which has training rooms, control rooms and observation rooms. Each of the training rooms contain a robot which simulates a real human body.

The robots cost anywhere from $42,000 to $98,000. They are very realistic and do

Provide the Helping Hand

By Angel Camacho

Phi Theta Kappa is the National Honor Society here at Victor Valley College who stands as a symbol for academic excellence. Most VVC students understand the difficulty maintaining a high GPA; however, being an honor student has major perks.

Students who have a GPA of 3.5 or above and acquire more than 12 transferrable units can be a candidate for the Phi Theta Kappa. Phi Theta Kappa represents and celebrates academic success; however, it is meant for more than that. President Michael Gatewood believes that “successful students should be a helping hand for those that are not so successful.”

When becoming a member, benefits will include but not limited to: Scholarships, College Fish, and Competitive Edge. The scholarships are dedicated to only Phi Theta Kappa members. College Fish is a website for transfer students that match you to the best fit university for your degree. Competitive Edge is used for giving the students an advantage for job applications. If needed they can also provide a letter of recommendation.

Members of Phi Theta Kappa, enjoy all the great opportunities and experiences The National Honor Society has to offer. Phi Theta Kappa is a team that provides services to the community and the school. PTK help tutor students and are involved in many community service projects; while maintaining a five -star rating.

College can be stressful, however, striving for success with a little help along the way will shape students into the most sought-after candidates for future jobs. “It has been a personal growing experience,” explained Gatewood. Help be a part of the growing chapter.

The Phi Theta Kappa will include a membership fee of $80; however, the benefits received are priceless. To join Phi Theta Kappa and represent Victor Valley College, log on to ptk.org to learn more information about the chapter.

of the emergency information packet located in all classrooms, of those 20 who were surveyed, 15 students stated they had no idea. Victor Valley student Jhana Dumas, suggested in the comment section, “I think only people with ID cards with the current year should be allowed on campus.” So, the questions remains, what can you do as a student to prepare for shooting in an instance notice? As students, how important is your safety on a college campus? Let us know on our Facebook page.

On Monday, November

30th, an “active shooter” exercise/training will be held on the Victor Valley College campus. This exercise will include Victor Valley College Police Department, the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department, and Victorville Police Station.

about 70% to 80% of what the human body does. This lab is a great way to give the students hands on training without having to worry about putting a person's life at risk. Terry Truelove, Professor and Simulation Lab Facilitator, is so excited to be able to utilize this new building. He believes that having these resources will be very beneficial for nursing students.

As nursing students perform a lab, there are no professors in the room instructing them. “It allows students to make their own decisions,” Truelove stated. During the lab, there is always someone in the control room controlling the robot and creating a unique and realistic experience for the students. In the observation room are other students to monitor what their peers are doing. Following the lab, everyone gets together and discusses the positive and negative aspects of the lab, giving constructive feedback.

Nursing student, Rose Harrison feels lucky to be able to use this building in her training. Though she said that performing a lab is nerve-racking, she explained that, “Hands on is much better and we're not harming real people.” She also appreciates the feedback from her peers that observe the lab and admitted that it really does help.

Another great feature in the Health and Sciences Building is a computer lab. This workstation is designed similarly to a room in which nursing students would take the NCLEX exam (National Council Licensure Examination). This test determines whether or not a student is prepared to practice nursing. Truelove explained that every time students have a quiz or a test, it is taken in this room to prepare students for the environment of the exam.

Victor Valley Community College has been placed in the top five percentile in the nation for all nursing programs, which is a great feat for the school. The Health and Sciences Building is already proving to be a successful addition to the campus.

VVC Student Goes From Riding the Bus to Winning a Car

By Hugo C. Valdez

Generally, companies and advertisers promote contest and giveaways offering great prizes if the required form is completed. Most people usually pass them up, while others take the time to enter, never imagining that they will win. Well, that wasn't the case for a very lucky Victor Valley College student who entered a contest on Valley Hi Toyota's Facebook page.

On Friday, November 6, Valley Hi Toyota presented Apple Valley resident, Sonia Espinoza, the keys to a 2005 Toyota Camry. That same day, coincidentally, was her 19th Birthday. Sonia is a full time student at VVC and up until this past week, her only means of transportation was the public bus. "Every morning I take two buses and that means I have to get up by 5:30 AM so I could be at the college by 6:15 AM", stated Sonia. "With college being so expensive, I wasn't able to afford, or even think about, buying a car." Sonia never dreamed that she would win a car. "If someone would have told me you are going to win a car on your 19th birthday, I would have looked at them and said, you're a liar." Sonia first saw the Valley Hi Toyota contest on Facebook and figured, "well it's worth a shot." A few weeks went by and on the day the winner was to be announced she anxiously awaited the results. "As I watched the video and I heard my name I couldn't believe it. I thought they have to be talking about another Sonia. I was really shocked and truly happy." After sitting down and having a moment to take it all in, Sonia ran to her mom so she could share the great news.

To her fellow VVC students, Sonia would like to say, "Keep trying, with anything in life it's totally worth giving it a shot. That one ounce of belief that you could win...is all it takes." Sonia also wished to express her gratitude to Valley Hi Toyota for helping make her dream of obtaining a nursing degree even more of a reality.

Over the past year, Valley Hi Toyota has been putting smiles on many local faces. Sandra was lucky-winner #10 of Valley Hi Toyota's used car giveaway contest. In November of 2014, VVC Staff member, Nancy Lewis, was winner #5. "We wanted to do something to give back to the community and help out families especially during the holiday season. We also want to make it fun and exciting. Every one of our winners tells us they never win anything. It becomes the perfect gift at a perfect time. We enjoy making a difference," stated Valley Hi Toyota's Social Media Manager Brian Ortega.

If you haven't entered you still have a chance to win. Valley Hi Toyota has decided to give away an 11th car. For more information and to stay informed be sure to like them on Facebook (www.facebook.com/valleyhitoyota).

How VVC Students Get Their News

By Lauryn Jackson
Photo Editor

Social media is redefining the limits of news. The group that is using the power of social media more than any other is the younger generation that grew up with it. The Victor Valley College campus largely represents this demographic. On the 30th of September, students were interviewed on social media and news.

Vinny Salazar stated that he uses Facebook for a majority of the local news. He's not alone. The biggest social media giant used among them was Facebook. According to Pew Research, 63 percent of all Facebook users use the site to keep up on the news.

Facebook isn't the only social media site that students at VVC use to channel in their news. When asked how he gets his news, Daniel Flores (pictured below) states, "I get my news from Reddit. It allows me to go on different online news sites." Twitter, Instagram, and Snapchat were mentioned as well. Twitter is the second in the running with Facebook and according to Pew Research, 8 percent of people use Twitter to share and find news. Two out of the eighteen students interviewed said that they used this social network for their news.

Despite how it may seem, traditional news isn't long gone with this generation. Many students read from a standard newspaper; some stating that they read Daily Press from "time to time." Paul Lopez, a VVC student, said, "Newspapers are very blunt, but are important because they were the driving force for the expansion there [in social media] now."

The daily 9 and 6 o'clock television news are still alive and relevant in today's fast-paced-world. A surprising amount of students said that their news source is television. Ashlynn stated that her main source for news is ABC news. ABC isn't the only one, Miguel Magllon, 3rd semester student, said, "I get my news from CNN and Forbes." The top news channel mentioned by students was Cable News Networking -- or CNN.

In the not too distant past, news gathered either from a newspaper, radio or broadcast television. Now, news is making a notable shift from the traditional, to the innovative. As social media grows, students here at VVC, share how they keep up with the news; differently than a few generations prior.

Pledge Against Terror

By Chris Ibarra
RamPage Reporter

A bomb dropped in this town, special forces take another town, US troops train rebels to defend a town down the road. Refugees are thankful for the involvement. However, is the chaos all the way around the world our problem in the first place?

There is a lot of speculation as to what the US's role should be in this conflict and whether or not we should be involved in the first place. These speculations should increase now that the Pentagon has presented a new plan for combating ISIS. According to the Business Insider's article "Pentagon pledges more raids, airstrikes against ISIS in Iraq," published October 28, 2015, Defense Secretary Ashton Carter announced that the US military would use a strategy that involves increasing the number of airstrikes and commando raids (Sisk, 2015). The US would also increase support for the Syrian-Arab coalition and Syrian Kurdish forces pressing against the ISIS capital of Raqqa (Sisk, 2015).

When spoken to about the severity of the events in Syria and Iraq, former US marine Dave Stoddard stated, "From what I've heard my buddies discuss, apparently ISIS are only about as dangerous as any other insurgent force we've fought in the past, so the tactics we've used before should be effective against them too." He went on to say that the real threat is the use of the media.

Should the US have to go in to stop these insurgent forces? An unnamed source gave this strong response to that question. "The Convention on Genocide was among the first United Nations conventions addressing humanitarian issues. It was adopted in 1948 in response to the atrocities committed during World War II and followed G.A. Res. 180 (II) of 21 December 1947 in which the UN recognized that 'genocide is an international crime, which entails the national and international responsibility of individual persons and states.' We, as defined by the United Nations, have a responsibility to protect those who can't protect themselves."

The US has done a great job of accepting these responsibilities but it's easy to sympathize with US citizens who are tired of the constant conflicts. Jessica Lona, a student at VVC stated, "We should train them to relieve the US from protecting them so they (US troops) could be pulled... (However) there's two sides you can pull from it. They can take care of themselves or they'll arm up and begin a war that we have to get involved in again." Lona said, alluding back to US involvement with Al-Qaeda before the attacks on 9/11.

International policing duties are painstaking jobs but maybe the best way to put it is, someone has to do them.

On November 2, VVC student, Esmeralda agreed to share her college experiences and goals with the Rampage. Esmeralda has been attending the school for almost a year now. When asked if she had a favorite spot on campus to study or do homework, Esmeralda stated that she enjoys the library.

She also shared her future plans for the college and beyond. Her short-term goal is to earn an Associate's degree in business, but her career goal is to work in either the business side of construction or in the fashion industry.

When asked what she thought of Kanye West, who is very involved with fashion, she said "I like his clothes, but not really his music."

ASB Gives Back Via Tailgate

By Leslie René Leach
RamPage Reporter

October 31, the Victor Valley College football team took the win over Mount San Jacinto college. With the final score 42-15, this launched the team into a two game winning streak. With an overall 7-1 record.

The ASB held its annual tailgating party and provided delicious food, prepared by the ASB student council. "We're doing this for the students wanting to say thanks for their support," stated one of the council members. They went all-out by providing BBQ, hot dogs, snacks, and drinks; all free to students who presented their VVC ID card. Foam fingers, pompoms and other items were given away. ASB cardholders received one item free and any additional item cost $1 each. ASB also hyped-up the crowd during the game by giving out free merchandise such as bracelets, necklaces and mini foam footballs. Another awesome event carried out by ASB; a dedicated and highly motivated group who desire to give back to the student body.

Young Frankenstein Brings the Audience To Life

By Brittany Nistler
RamPage Reporter

Victor Valley College's opening night performance of Young Frankenstein the Musical was a hit and left the crowd laughing long after the show had ended. Director and Chairman for the Theater Department, Ed Heaberlin, gives his own praise of the musical. "I'm very much pleased with opening night. The way the performers connected with the audience, feeding off their laughter and applause." Ed also said about his assistant, Willow, "She's been such an amazing help with the production and keeping everything organized!"

In the first Act, there are 11 scenes, each with about one song, such as "Please Don't Touch Me" and "He Was My Boyfriend." The second Act, included eight scenes, with songs "Please Send Me Someone", and the classic "Puttin' On The Ritz". With its comical, yet raunchy love songs, the musical is perfect for this audience. The actors did a fantastic job in leads and supporting cast. It stayed true to the core material. With a great symphony to boot! Overall great acting and pretty hilarious." Roth also said that he would definitely be interested in seeing the Theater Department do more musicals like Young Frankenstein.

Another great addition to the musical was the live ensemble, allowing the audience to enjoy the music while the cast sang and danced their ways into the audience's hearts. Choreographer, Katherine Page, choreographed an excellent dance piece, while dance captains, Olivia and Adam Rubio and the Dance Core, danced gracefully on set.

Ed passionately talks about the Theater Department, saying, "We hope to improve the department by increasing our budget, adding a shop foreman and hopefully adding another theatre arts instructor". He also says that the Theater Department has the potential to be a center for excellence and that they have so many possibilities but are their roles as Frederick Frankenstein, Inga, Igor and Inspector Kemp.

Attendee, Tyler Roth, enjoyed the 1974 film, but had never seen a live musical. He was impressed and thoroughly enjoyed the musical. He said, "Impressive acting by the limited in resources and staff.

Overall, the musical had so many great assets and used the resources available to great heights; such as stage props and costumes. Young Frankenstein was the musical to see this semester.

Recital Talent Runs Deep

By Swahn LaMar
RamPage Reporter

On November 13th, the Victor Valley College Performing Arts Center featured a music recital. The event's performers were students and faculty of the school's music program. The musicians played 10 different songs.

The event itself was somewhat chaotic, certain performers were sick and were unable to attend which meant their time slots had to be filled with less practiced material by other musicians.

Regardless of the situation, the performers were facing, they all played very well. The music evoked a somber feeling with intervals of loud emotion. The musician's talents were clearly evident.

The performance showed that the school's music program has potential and talent and the concerts shouldn't be missed. The next concert is called "Thursday Night Jazz" and will be on the 10th of December. The concert is sure to be entertaining and enjoyable. The music students of VVC their talent and are an excellent addition to the school.

Steve Jobs Film Review

By Diallo "Markus" Kahin
RamPage Reporter

Writer Arron Sorkin elects to show who Steve Jobs was by giving a glimpse into three of his famous product launches. The film's three acts are shot differently.

The 1984 Macintosh sequence is filmed in 16mm film to give it a grainy look. The 1988 NeXT cube scene is shot in 35mm, and finally the 1998 iMac presentation is shot digitally giving it a glossy HD look. These filming style aids in differentiating something that could otherwise be visually boring by the 45 minute mark.

Michael Fassbender was tasked with difficult role of playing the brilliant but often mean spirited and absurdly stubborn Steve Jobs. Fassbender brilliantly portrays Jobs as someone who absolutely believes he is the smartest person in whatever room he walks into. Seth Rogen gets a chance to show off his dramatic range by playing the Apple co-founder and one time friend of Jobs, Steve Wozniak. He's the most likable character in the film and his back and forth with Jobs are the most revealing character moments. Jeff Daniels, Kate Winslet and the three actresses (Makenzie Moss, Ripley Sobo, Perla Haney-Jardine) who play the daughters of Jobs all do fantastic work as well. This is one of the most well-acted movies I've ever seen.

Overall Steve Jobs is a rousing success. It holds no punches when exposing the darker side of the man who most of us only know for being the brilliant designer of all things Apple. I give Steve Jobs a 10/10.

Rams Volleyball Shows Grace in Defeat

By Robert X. Campos
RamPage Reporter

October 28, the VVC gymnasium had parents, fellow students, and athletes cheering for the VVC Rams volleyball team. The Rams had a tough challenge facing San Bernardino Valley College in a best of five match. The Rams fought hard in the sets, but were tragically beaten three to one. Although the Rams did not leave victorious, they displayed a tremendous amount of teamwork, dignity, and hustle; which demands respect. Not one set was unevenly contested, with two of the four matches actually going over the usual 25-point mark because the two teams were so evenly matched.

Through all of the highs and lows of each set, Rams never lost their cool, and the crowd started to notice. Suddenly, the VVC gym started to shake and got loud with fellow VVC athletes in the stands cheering each point and pass on. San Bernardino Valley College got a quick message that they were the visiting team, and it started to show in the second of four matches. This was the only game that was not as close as the others, with the Rams winning 25 to 17.

The support was contagious. The fans began to stomp and scream to show their support of the Rams. The team really picked up on the crowd's vibe and played extremely hard, but were torn down by trivial mistakes. Each match more exhilarating than the last.

Women's Volleyball may have lost the match, but gained the support of the student body and fellow athletes.

VVC Rams Bounce Back After Upset

By Bryan Garcia
RamPage Reporter

The Rams were successful in bouncing back from a tough loss to San Bernardino Valley College, with a 79-0 victory over Compton College. It was their highest scoring game of the season, with their previous season high being 58 points.

VVC dominated their opponents from the beginning and a second consecutive loss was out of the question. Quarterback Sam Allen ran for the first touchdown of the game and threw for two more before the end of the first quarter. Dakota Prussia and Desmond Johnson were on the receiving end of Allen's touchdown passes.

The second quarter was more of the same as Johnson ran for his second touchdown of the game, and running back

Jason Knowles ran for his first and only touchdown. Devonte Milligan and Justin Davis then gave the Rams a 48-0 lead to end the first half, scoring on passes from Allen.

The result was decided in the first half, and the Rams seemed to cruise through the following two quarters. Aaron

Parker, Emetrious Scott, and Johnson rushed for a touchdown each. Also, Defensive Back Ty'rail Hawkins prevented what seemed to be Compton's best chance of scoring, returning an interception for 95 yards. Kicker James Liker was successful on a 26 yard field goal, and was successful on 10 of the 11 extra point opportunities.

On offense VVC was unstoppable, seemingly scoring at will. Their defense was also impressive as they held their opponent to only 82 yards total and delivered their second shutout of the season. They had 5 sacks, forced a fumble, and had two interceptions, a lethal combination that led to a Rams victory.

This win, as well as the wins on 10/31 and 11/7 and 11/14 solidified a share of the conference title with San Bernardino Valley and College of the Desert. With these victories, the Rams have gained entry to the SCFA American Division Championship Bowl scheduled for 6 p.m. on November 21, at Santa Monica College.
